GOOD PACKING IS NECESSARY.

In the November Woman's Home Companion Albert S. Burleson, Post-master General of the United States, writes a suggestive and helpful article entitled "Marketing by Mail," in which he shows what the parcel post can do for the American housewife. Mr. Burleson comments as follows on the necessity of good packing:

"Patrons of the parcel post system have not yet fully learned the lesson of proper packing; and I would urge every individual to give this special attention, whether it means simply the proper scaling of an envelope or the proper wrapping and tying of heavy packages. Every postmaster will gladly give fullest directions if the postoffice patrons will only consult him freely."

"As a child I had every luxury implicationable, and my mother never had to turn a hand to do a thing."

"I often heard my grandfather advising my tether et lay away some money for his old age, or the rainy day which was bound to compatible to the old? What good would I get out of it then?"

"At the age of fity-two the storm broke in all its tury, and the house which father had founded on the sands of pleasure was awept away on the first blast.

"His partner disappeared with every available cent of the firm's money and father was left—stranded.

"Well I remember the day he came house, haggard and bent, grown old in an hour. The wakeful nights and the hideous days which followed brought no help.

"At forty-seven years of age my macher cooked her first meal.

"Prom leavily we dropped to poverly, and now father and mother are sixty-nine and sixty-four years and have no place which they can call home, although they know they are welcome with us, their children, with whom they slay.

"But father often says now, 'What a fool I was! Oh, what a fool!"

"I am the youngest child, and with the lesson of my parents before me, will larn to build my house, while I yet have time, on a rock foundation."

"Watch the woman who hurries along as if she were anxious to part company with the pavement. Her steps are quick and scappy. She has plenty of vim.

"When you see a woman planting her feet firmly on the ground and walking with a free awing you may be sure she is wholesome, to be depended upon and capable. She will be your friend on rainy days just as much as or more than when the sun shines."—Philadelphia North American.

The invincible Yaqui.

Against all assaults upon his stronghold the Yaqui Indian of Mexico has proved invincible. For more than a century relentless war has been waged against him by the Mexicans, but they against him by the Mexicans, but they have neither subdued him nor tamed him, and as for conquering him, that, it is generally admitted, will come only with his extermination. In the campaigus against him the Yaqui's most effective weapon is the poisoned arrow. His bow is made of black palm wood, and the arrows are long, sharp and so poisoned as to cause certain but not immediate death. Horrible suffering follows a scratch from the point, the victim dying in from three to seven days. No antidote has been discovered, although the Yaquis themselves possess the secret of one.—Boston Herald.

A nail is a common article of manufacture which is turned out by thousands every hour in the factory and is always absent in every household when it is most needed. Every house is full of nails. The walls bristle with m. The floors and ceilings are full them. The floors and ceilings are full of them. But if you need one to drive into a wall or to help dispatch a box going by express you might as well look for a gold nugget in an ash heap. When by some miracle a nail permits itself to be discovered it is always crooked. The art of placing it on your wife's best managany table and straightening it out with a poker in place of the hammer you cannot locate place of the hammer you cannot locate is an art yet in its infancy. Some cen-turies hence it may reach a develop-ment hitherto undreamed of —Life.

The Oyster's Diet.

Some interesting facts concerning the diet of the oyster have been discovered by the investigations of the English board of fisheries. The experts have found, for instance, that the oyster is an exceptionally dainty feeder. Hythg almost exclusively on a vegetable diet. Seaweed and the minute pine poller of the water are its staples. If pollen of the water are its staples. dines, moreover, only between o'clock noon and 2 in the afterno During those hours the oyster opens his shell, permits the water to flow through the feeding gill and expels it. The gill extracts the food desired.— Philadelphia Record.

A Reconstructed Man Costs $500.

With exhibitions and catalogues of artificial limbs now brought to notice one gets to calculating the cost of a reconstructed man. Seemingly a little more than $500 would suffice. A pair of artificial legs costs about $150 and a pair of arms about $100. Ears, with drums, etc., cost $75 each; eyes $50 a pair, and so on. Without hears and brain a man is worth about $500.
